JURIED EXHIBITIONS:

During my career, I have had 68 designs accepted and exhibited in national and international juried exhibitions (33 at the associate professor level), in which I am the single designer/artist or listed as first designer/artist. Early in my career I did exhibit the same designs in multiple exhibitions (i.e. 3 designs in 2 exhibitions each). I now only exhibit an original design in a single juried exhibition and never resubmit the design to another juried venue. Thus, each piece is original work not previously presented/shown or published. I have received 9 awards for my juried pieces during my academic career and 20 design awards during my lifetime. None of the 68 items accepted to exhibitions during my career include student work in which I was a mentor. Student works I have mentored and exhibited in juried competitions are listed separately on my curriculum vita.

When evaluating juried design competitions, it is important to recognize the percentage of acceptance to the exhibition (the lower percentage the higher the quality of the exhibition) and the reputation of the juror(s). Evaluating both aspects of juried exhibitions is equivalent to ranking the quality of scholarly journals. Fortunately, the majority of exhibitions I have been accepted into achieve acceptance rates of 50% and lower; however, the Handweaver's Guild of America Small Expressions Exhibition has had 23% to 26% acceptance rate and The Little Black Dress design competition had only a 21% acceptance making both of these highly prestigious exhibitions.

PUBLISHED WORKS:

The majority of my scholarly endeavors have been in the area of creative scholarship; however, a secondary area of scholarly inquiry is in the area of the impact blacks, mainly women have had on the textiles and clothing industry. In the foreword of her book, Nine Black Women: An Anthology of Nineteenth-Century Writers from the United States, Canada, Bermuda, and The Caribbean, Dr. Moira Ferguson, recognizes the usefulness of appearance as tool for investigating the lives of black women writers and personally thanks me for introducing her to this ideology, while her student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The significance of my research area is further supported by Dr. Ferguson's acknowledgement.

Other scholarly work are in the areas of apparel design, textile design and product development.

PAPERS PRESENTED:

Refereed Presentations

During my career I have presented 85 presentations at professional conferences in which the majority has been at the International Textile and Apparel Association annual meeting. Of these presentations, a significant number have been either graduate student thesis research (41) I have advised or the dissemination of teaching strategies or courses I have developed (26). In many cases, the presentations have been collaborative in nature.

COURSES TAUGHT:

Have taught over 300 courses from 1990 to present at Iowa State University, Colorado State University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln from 100-level to doctoral classes. The classes have been delivered by: (a) residence instruction on campus, (b) continuing and distance education, flipped (c) online and hybrid. The topic areas include : flat-pattern, CAD pattern making, illustration, line development), historic costume, textile design (repeat prints, engineered prints, crocheting, knitting, felting, bead embroidery, quilting, and various fiber art techniques), computer aided design, product development (soft lines/soft goods), and website development.

DEVELOPMENT OF NEW COURSES:

Over the years I have developed courses or offered group studies to meet the needs of our students in the Apparel & Merchandising major. The following are new resident instruction and distance education courses I developed and taught at Colorado State University between the years of 2007 and 2012 and at Iowa State University since 2012:

Course Number	Title	Semester First Taught
Iowa State University
AMD 178	Introduction to Apparel Design Studio	Fall 2014
AMD 329/528 ⁶	Digital Textile Printing (with Tina Denekas)	Fall 2014
AMD 328 ⁷	CAD Pattern Making	Spring 2014
Colorado State University
AM 140	Apparel Design	Summer 2000
AM 141	Apparel Production I	Spring 2000
AM 143	Introduction to Apparel Design	Spring 2004
AM 110	Digital Technology for Apparel & Merchandising	Spring 2010
AM 241	Apparel Production II	Fall 1999
AM 243	Adobe Photoshop for Textile Designers	Summer 2004
AM 341	Computer Aided Design (CAD) Apparel Production	Spring 2000
AM 344	Adobe Illustrator for Fashion Designers	Summer 2004
AM 364	History of Designers and Manufacturers	Summer
AM 446	Apparel Design and Production	Fall 1997
AM 546	Theoretical Design Solutions	Fall 2004

AM 446 – Apparel Design and Production (the capstone experience for students in the Apparel Design & Production Concentration) is a class in which I made significant curricular changes during my time at CSU. Similar changes were made to the AMD 495 at ISU, the capstone experience for apparel design and technical design students.

During the majority of my career at CSU, there was only one other tenured faculty and I to regularly teach courses in the Apparel Design and Production (ADP) Concentration. As a result, we were not able to offer elective courses for ADP; therefore often I would develop and teach group studies to fill in curricular gaps. Titles such as “Fabric of Indian Life,” “Film, Fashion & Form,” “The Philosophy of Knitting,” “The Mary Seacole Project” and “Tailoring” demonstrate the depth and breadth of the field and the types of group studies I have developed to enrich the experiences of students in the concentration and major.

⁶ Divided into two separate offerings as of Fall 2015, one for undergraduates and the other for graduate students.

⁷ AMD 310 as of Fall 2016.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES RELATED TO TEACHING:

Industry Visits

- 2015 Target + College Consortium Meeting, Minneapolis, Minnesota
- 2014 Kohl's Iowa State University faculty visit, Menomonee Falls, Wisconsin
- 2014 Bureau Veritas visit with American Apparel & Footwear Association (AAFA), Buffalo, New York
- 2013 VF Jeans Innovation Center with AAFA, Greensboro, North Carolina
- 2013 VF Corp. with AAFA, Cypress, California
- 2012 Karen Kane with AAFA, Los Angeles, California
- 2012 VF Contemporary Brands (VANS and SeVen Jeans) with AAFA, Los Angeles, California

Trainings on Lectra Software (to facilitate the integration of CAD software into the Apparel Design & Production curriculum):

- 2009 Lectra Training, New York City – Kaledo Prints, Weaves, and Knits, New York City
- 2000 Lectra Training – Sketch, New York City
- 1999 Lectra Training – U4ia, Modaris, and Diamino, New York City and Los Angeles

Other trainings that have impacted curriculum development:

- 2011 Women of Color Leadership Training, Colorado State University
- 2007 - 2008 Colorado Network of Women Leaders (CNWL) Academic Management Institute
- 2006 Kappa Omicron Nu Emerging and New Administrator's Workshop
- 2000 – 2006 CTSS Trainings, Photoshop, Dreamweaver, PowerPoint, and RamCT, Colorado State University
- 1998 - 1999 Participant in the CSU Curriculum Infusion Project

DONATION INVOLVED IN OBTAINING FOR THE MAJOR:

Iowa State University

- 2015 Cabela's – Sample Garments, value unknown
- 2015 Pearl Izumi – Sample Garments, value unknown
- 2014 PGM Dressforms (3 forms), $1358.00

Colorado State University

- 2011 Hoxmeier Fabrics, $18,640.00
- 2011 Lectra Systems, $2.2 million
- 2010 Lectra Systems, $1.3 million
- 2009 Lectra Systems, $1.8 million
- 2002 Lectra Systems, $585,000
- 2002 Miller International/Rocky Mountain Clothing Company – Findings, $101,000.00
- 2000 Mr. Blackwell, $20,000.00
- 2000 Mr. Blackwell Fashion Show, $7,900.00
- 1999 Lectra Systems, $3.2 million

STUDENT WORK ACCEPTED INTO JURIED EXHIBITIONS:

I have taught or mentored 57 pieces of student work (undergraduate and graduate) accepted in juried exhibitions during my teaching career. I do not list myself as a co-author on student juried work, although this is common practice of some designers/artists.

*After Moving to Iowa State University

Graduate Advising of Women's Studies Students

32 Women's Studies (WS) Interdisciplinary Graduate Certificate Students in which the goal is to integrate the WS certificate program into their major program years 2010 to 2012.

DESCRIPTION OF MENTORING ACTIVITIES:

My mentorship of students outside of submissions of works to juried exhibitions will involve participation in the Iowa State University Undergraduate Research & Creative Expression Symposium as I did with Colorado State University's Celebrating Undergraduate Research and Creativity (CURC) symposium. Since 2001, I mentored 33 students to participate in CURC in which 8 received, University Highest Distinction Award Winner (top 5% of participants), 2 received University High Distinction Award Winner (top 10% of participants), and 5 received College of Applied Human Sciences Awards.

I became the Honor's Advisor for the Apparel and Merchandising major in 2002. The major averages 5 to 6 honor students a year, which I provide academic advising. I have also advised the Honor's thesis projects for the following students at both Colorado State University and Iowa State University:

2016	Courtney Beringer
2016	Sam Vando Loo
2015	Allison Kristukas
2015	Nakisa Kachingwe – Rosenfeld Internship
2013	Mark Berquist
2013	Corona Kenowski
2012	Jenny Babos
2011	Emily Woods
2010	Josi Kramer
2007	Kaitlyn Thomas
2004	Beth Bradley
2003	Matthew Hedges
2003	Stacey Brower

● OTHER ACTIVITIES/ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN TEACHING:

Student engagement with visiting scholars and artists has been integral to infusing the Apparel and Merchandising curriculum with various experiences and perspectives. I have coordinated the programming (in one case wrote a grant) for visiting scholars such as Ali Rahimi, celebrity couturier in Los Angeles; Robert Hillestad, Emeritus Faculty in Textiles, Clothing, and Design at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; and the guest artists for ArtWear Fashion Week in Fort Collins to visit with students in studio classes. I have also held weekend workshops for students in the program entitled, “Saturdays with Sanders,” in which I demonstrate various construction and textile design techniques. These experiences provide inspirational opportunities for students and faculty in the program.
